- 38 C give an order or state a rule

Must and have to express an order or a rule, unlike should and could.

- 39 B make suggestions and recommendations, and give advice

Should is the modal for suggestions, recommendations and advice.

- 40 C shouldn't

Should not contracts to shouldn't.

- 41 A between the subject and the main verb

The modal sits between the subject and the verb: You should study.

- 42 D You must wear a life jacket on the boat.

Must expresses obligation — a rule, not a suggestion.

- 43 D have to

The situation is urgent, so it needs the obligation modal have to.

- 44 C should

This is advice from a friend, so should is correct.

- 45 C might

Might is a modal of speculation — the speaker is not sure.

- 46 D could

Could expresses a possibility in the future.

- 47 A could, may, might

The modals of speculation taught in the unit are could, may and might.

- 48 A It might use the light to lure prey.

After a modal we use the bare infinitive — use, with no -s and no to.

- 49 C You shouldn't go to bed so late.

Going to bed late is the likely cause of being tired.

- 50 A You should study hard.

The sensible advice before an exam is to study hard.

51 C I think that you should ...

Adding I think that you before should softens the suggestion.

52 A They may use the light to communicate.

May, like every modal, is followed by the bare infinitive.

53 A should

The sentence proposes a helpful action, so the positive suggestion modal should fits.

Section E — Grammar: Possessives (54–63)

54 B an apostrophe + s

A singular noun takes apostrophe + s: Ahmed's house.

55 C an apostrophe after the s

A plural ending in s takes only an apostrophe: the students' desks.

56 B my uncle's boat

One uncle is singular, so it takes apostrophe + s.

57 D my friends' fishing boxes

All my friends is plural and ends in s, so the apostrophe goes after the s.

58 B the students' desks

Plural noun ending in s → apostrophe after the s.

59 A Sara's bag

Sara is a singular name, so it takes apostrophe + s.

60 C Its eyes are big and bright.

The possessive its never takes an apostrophe.

61 A Because its is already a possessive pronoun.

Its is a possessive pronoun in its own right, so no apostrophe is needed.

62 D the jellyfish's tentacles

One jellyfish is singular, so it takes apostrophe + s.

63 D It's a very unusual sea creature.

It's is the short form of it is; the other three need the possessive its.

Section F — Expressing Opinions, Sentence Structure and Linking Words (64–68)

64 B In my opinion, ...

In my opinion, I think that and I am sure all introduce an opinion.

65 B Some people think all sharks are dangerous.

The natural opinion sentence is Some people think all sharks are dangerous.

66 D am

The fixed phrase is I am sure that ...

67 C opinion

The fixed phrase is In my opinion ...

68 D to improve organization and fluency, and to join ideas into longer sentences

Linking words help with sequencing and with making longer, smoother sentences.

Section G — Extra Practice: Vocabulary and Meaning (69–80)

69 C bottom

The surface is the top of the water; the bottom is the opposite.

70 D predator — prey

A predator hunts and prey is hunted. The other pairs are near-synonyms or unrelated.

71 A harbor

The other three are ocean animals; a harbor is a place.

72 C a herbivore

A plant-eater is a herbivore.

73 A treat used material so that it can be used again

Recycling turns used material into something that can be used again.

74 D thrown away there carelessly

To dump is to get rid of something carelessly.

75 A huge

Huge is the adjective meaning very big.

76 C an engineer

Engineers are the people making new machines to clean up the oceans.

77 B trash

Trash and garbage both mean things people throw away.

78 D one particular type of living thing

A species is a single, particular type of living thing.

79 C could disappear from the Earth

Endangered means the species could disappear, often because of humans.

80 D the sun

Solar means of the sun — as in the water wheel's solar panels.

Section H — Extra Practice: Word Building and Spelling (81–90)

81 D pollution

The correct spelling is pollution — double l, single t.

82 B carnivorous

The correct spelling is carnivorous.

83 D tentacles

The correct spelling is tentacles.

84 B environment

The correct spelling is environment — the n before the m is often forgotten.

85 C pollution

The verb pollute becomes the noun pollution.

86 C poisonous

Adding -ous gives the adjective poisonous.

87 C harmful

Adding -ful gives the adjective harmful.

88 B protection

The verb protect becomes the noun protection.

89 B installed

Installed is an action, so it is a verb. Garbage and harbor are nouns and huge is an adjective.

90 A huge

Huge describes a noun, so it is an adjective; the other three are nouns.

Section I — Extra Practice: Modals and Possessives (91–100)

91 B I think that you should recycle more.

A modal is followed by the bare infinitive — no to, no -ing, no -s.

92 B must not

Must not states a firm prohibition; the others only suggest or speculate.

93 D You have to recycle your bottles.

Have to expresses obligation; the others are suggestions or possibilities.

94 A could

The speaker is guessing, so a modal of speculation such as could is needed.

95 D You should take it to a repair shop.

Only this option gives advice that actually answers the problem.

96 A the sharks' teeth

A plural ending in s takes the apostrophe after the s: the sharks' teeth.

97 C the whale's tail

A singular noun takes apostrophe + s: the whale's tail.

98 B James's books

James is singular but ends in s, so James's (or James') is correct.

99 D The fisherman checked his friend's boat.

One friend is singular, so the possessive is friend's.

100 B I don't think you should watch so much.

I don't think you should ... is the polite way to suggest a change.

Section J — Extra Practice: Linking Words and Sentence Structure (101–110)

101 A but

But joins two ideas that contrast with each other.

102 A for example

For example introduces an example of the thing just mentioned.

103 D First of all

First of all signals the first point in a sequence.

104 A However

However introduces the contrasting idea that they had to leave.

105 D also

Also adds a further idea; however and but show contrast.

106 A SVC (Subject – Verb – Complement)

Deep describes the subject the ocean, so it is a complement.

107 B SVO (Subject – Verb – Object)

Its lure receives the action of the verb, so it is an object.

108 A I believe that sharks should be protected.

Only the first sentence states what the speaker believes; the others state facts.

109 A I caught a fish and then I ate it.

The linking words and then join the two actions in the right order.

110 D because

Because introduces the reason that justifies the opinion.
